I am using C#. My project includes a ribbon control with a print section. The ribbon has a button which is bound to a command, "print." My command works fine as the user does print. I have placed this command in the "Initialize" function. However, when the user clicks the print button it shows up as a pop up box. This is not what I want because there is no print screen. I want the user to be able to print a page as they normally would. What I need is to have the print dialog not show up in WPF. I created a "PrintDialog" class and called it. Then I called it and passed the messagebox as a parameter. The messagebox showed up, but it did not ask for a print screen. It just printed the whole site instead. I have tried looking up the problem, but I have found nothing to help me. Here is my code. class PrintDialog : IDisposable { private ToolTip toolTip; private PrintDialog() { toolTip = new ToolTip(); toolTip.IsHitTestVisible = false; } public void Show(string title, params object[] props) { toolTip.Content = string.Format(CultureInfo.CurrentCulture, title 3e33713323
